

MELISSA “JERSEY” WESTON

Educator, South Campus

What inspired you to become an educator?

I have always enjoyed teaching people new things. I now have the opportunity to inspire students into their future careers.

What do you like most about instructing the next generation of cosmetologists?

Seeing the look on a student’s face when something finally clicks and makes sense. I enjoy watching them grow and better themselves as individuals.

What is a typical day like in your position?

I teach the students fundamentals of learning. I observe them to help them in any obstacles they come across while doing practical work.

What is your fondest memory thus far as an educator?

Watching my first class that I taught on my own take their first guests and be a success.

What advice do you like to share with new students and/or those preparing to graduate?

To keep your vision of what you want. Strive to do the best you know how.
